ELIZABETH KELLY, Correspondent.

The Intermountain and Colorado Catholic is placed on sale at the James Clarke church goods house, 617 California street, Denver, Colo.

By his presence of mind quelling what might have been a panic, Father James A. Ryan presided over the St. Leo's church last Sunday morning under trying circumstances. While a voice called "Fire!" from the rear of the crowded church, the priest, who was offering the sacrifice of the mass, turned and asked that the exit from the church be orderly, and that a stampede be avoided for the sake of the lives of the weaker ones.

It was a trying moment. Father Ryan had not only to look to the safety of his congregation, but he had to beat out the flames which were eating the flimsy draperies of the altar before which he was officiating. As a result of his heroism, the assistant pastor of St. Leo's church has two badly burned hands and has lost his handsome vestments.

It was shortly after 12 o'clock on Sunday when the trouble at St. Leo's was noticed. In honor of the feast of All Saints, the church was dressed in its most artistic drapery and there were quantities of candles. Father Ryan had preached a sermon on the significance of the day and had left the church when John King, one of the six acolytes, noticed a little flame coming from behind a bank of palms. Without meaning to alarm the congregation, bowed in prayer, he approached the priest at the altar and called his attention to it. Suddenly the flame caught in fury and the men and women kneeling a few feet back screamed in terror. Father Ryan gave his first attention to the congregation, praying for order, and then with the assistance of the altar boys tore the draperies from the altar and beat them under foot until the flames were extinguished. His vestments were burned and scorched beyond repair. There were no accidents among the people.

Because of their interest in juvenile improvement and the salvation of the unfortunate boys and girls who have not home influence to govern their lives, the various Catholic orphanages of Denver had special masses offered last Saturday for the success of the candidacy of Judge Ben B. Lindsey, founder of Denver's famous juvenile court. Although the church does not meddle in politics, the priests gladly rendered this tribute to the sake of the young people. Father William O'Ryan added his tribute to the glory of Judge Lindsey in a sermon on last Sunday at St. Leo's church of which he is pastor.

Into the city of the dead, churchgoers went last Sunday to inaugurate the month dedicated to the relief of the suffering souls in purgatory. While in both cemeteries the relatives and friends of deceased gathered, the official memorial service was at Mount Olivet, on the Golden road. It was a procession of the clergy, followed by the laymen, Father Wulstan, O. F. M., assistant pastor of St. Elizabeth's church, blessed the graves, while Father Edward Barry, S. J., pastor of the Sacred Heart church, delivered a touching sermon on the practice of helping the dead by means of prayer. Special cars carried the largest crowd which ever assembled at Mount Olivet out to the cemetery during the early afternoon.

All Saints' Day.

Last Sunday was All Saints' day, and special exercises were held in all the churches of the city. At Logan avenue chapel solemn high mass was celebrated. Father F. X. Heneghan was celebrant, with Father H. L. McMenamin as deacon, Father J. F. McDonough, sub-deacon, and Father Lefebvre, assistant priest. The sermon of the day was by Father McMenamin, who dwelt on the glories of the Church Triumphant.

Ketcham-Keating.

The wedding of Miss Ella Ketcham and John Keating, both members of the cathedral congregation, which took place at Logan avenue chapel on Tuesday morning, Nov. 3, drew a large crowd of friends. Father McMenamin officiated.

Another wedding of the week was that of Miss Mary Hartley and Joseph Murray, which took place at Logan avenue chapel on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. The pastor, Father McMenamin, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Murray is the daughter of the immaculate Conception school and lived in the cathedral parish for many years, where she was well known and liked. She has done much to make the local branch of the Queen's Daughters a power for good in the community. Mr. Murray is a business man of Colorado Springs, and in that city the young people will make their home. Mrs. Murray is the daughter of Mrs. Nellie Hartley of 2129 High street.

Church and Personal.

William Tebeau, a young man who came to Denver only a short time ago in the hope of making his fortune, died Saturday night at 1430 Logan avenue, his temporary home. He was a brother of George Tebeau, whose fame as a baseball player is national. The body was shipped east for interment.

Bishop Metz spent last Sunday at La Junta, where he officiated at St. Patrick's church, of which Father F. Dilly is pastor. Religious fervor is alive at La Junta, a mission having been concluded there recently.

Cards are out announcing the wedding of Miss Marguerite J. McGill, daughter of P. J. McGill, and Dr. Herbert Watson McLaughlin. The ceremony was performed last Wednesday evening.

Denver friends of Father A. B. Casey, formerly assistant pastor of the cathedral, are interested to learn that Greeley, the town where he is now stationed, is to have the finest church building in northern Colorado. The cost will be about $50,000, and the design will be pure Gothic. The foundation will be laid by stone from the quarries at Fort Collins. The building will be 110 feet long, and the tower 145 feet high.

Above the altar will be five stained glass windows, representing the sorrowful Mysteries, while the five at the right will depict the glorious Mysteries and those at the left the joyful Mysteries. The immaculate Conception and the Sacred Heart will adorn the transept windows.

Father Casey has accomplished wonders in his work at Greeley, where his last four years have been spent.

El Jebel temple witnessed what will probably prove to be the gayest ball of the season Thursday evening, Oct. 28, when the Sacred Heart Aid society gave its annual benefit for the poor of the city. An unusually large number of young people and many particularly pretty gowns characterized the occasion. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Omer, and participated in by fully 100 couples, while many more spent a delightful evening at the card tables which were arranged in the spacious gallery overlooking the ballroom. The affair, besides being a social success, netted about $800, which will be used to great advantage in caring for the many poor families of the city dependent upon the Sacred Heart Aid society. The portion of the money will be set aside toward the establishment of a home for the aged poor, the fund for which is steadily growing. This is the object for which the society has striven for some years.

Good Shepherd Association.

The Good Shepherd Aid association is working strenuously to make a success of the ball to be given on December 2nd in aid of the home on West Cedar avenue and Cherokee street. Some months ago the Sisters purchased a large and desirable tract of ground near University Park, but their financial condition does not warrant their commencing the erection of a new building before spring, and in the meantime it is necessary that their charges be made comfortable in the old quarters during the winter months.

St. Clara's Aid society met Monday afternoon, Nov. 2, at St. Clara's orphanage, Twelfth and Champa streets. The members spent the afternoon sewing for the little orphans. Work on the new orphanage near Manhattan Beach is progressing favorably.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Vincent's Aid society was held Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 3, at the home of Mrs. Fred P. Johnson, 322 S. Sherman avenue. Preparations were launched for the annual ball, which is usual will be on New Year's night.

The Sacred Heart Aid society met on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 5, with Mrs. C. H. Bunte, 312 West First avenue. A report on the recent ball was made and proved very encouraging. Mrs. Bunte, who has for years been an active and efficient member, further testified her interest in the society by giving of her life membership. The election of officers will occur at the first meeting in December.

The feast of All Souls was properly observed in all the Catholic churches of the city. In Logan avenue chapel High Mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock Monday by Rev. H. L. McMenamin, with Rev. J. F. McDonough, deacon and Rev. P. X. Heneghan, sub-deacon. Rev. Father Lefebvre was master of ceremonies. Music was furnished by the Junior choir. During the month of November the 8:15 o'clock Mass each morning at the chapel will be read for the deceased members of the congregation.

Personal.

The Misses Kathryn and Margaret Bennett have moved from 1401 Cherokee street to the pretty new home recently purchased by them on Gilpin street, near Eighteenth avenue.

Mrs. Adolph Fluecken went to Colorado Springs on Wednesday to attend the funeral of her nephew, Fred Fluecken, who died of typhoid fever after a long illness. Mr. Fluecken was 31 years of age and was employed in the Western Union telegraph office of his home town. He is survived by his parents and four younger brothers and sisters. The young man was baptised on his deathbed by his cousin, Rev. Charles H. Hagrus, of St. Mary's church, Colorado Springs, who also officiated at the funeral.

The Sisters of Loretto have extended an invitation to all old graduates of St. Mary's academy to be present at the academy on Friday afternoon, Nov. 27, to organize an alumnae association. All out-of-town graduates who cannot be present are requested to write and signify their intention of becoming members.

Miss Fowle recently took part in the international typewriting contest in New York City and ranked sixth, while in the contest for amateurs she stood third. Miss Fowle has her own office in the Equitable building and has an extensive patronage.

Miss Hazel Kendall, who spent the summer in Colorado Springs, visited her cousin, Mrs. M. J. McCarthy, in Denver, a few days last week before returning to her home in Chicago.

Miss Kate Flaherty of 2845 Champa street was hostess Friday afternoon at a card party.

Miss Clara Matty has returned from Pueblo, where she went to attend the Thatcher-Wheeler wedding.

Joseph Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Murray of St. Dominic's parish, has just written a two-step, which promises to become very popular. It has been favorably commented upon by the leading musicians of Denver.

Mrs. Annie Gavi has commenced the erection of a new house on Main street between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues, which when completed will be occupied by the family.

Obituary.

Eugene McCarthy, prominent in the business and political life of Denver, died Wednesday morning, October 28, at his home, 2440 Humboldt street. Mr. McCarthy was ill but a week and at no time until a few hours before his death was his condition considered serious. His wife and daughter, Miss Esther McCarthy, were in St. Louis and did not reach home until Friday morning. The only relative at his bedside when he died was Miss Mary Teahan, of San Francisco, a sister of Mrs. McCarthy. Mr. McCarthy was born in County Cork, Ireland, fifty-eight years ago and had been a resident of Colorado for about thirty years. For a long time he had been actively interested in politics and was serving as county commissioner at the time of his death. Mr. McCarthy's funeral took place Monday morning, November 2nd, from Annunciation church, and was under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. Delegations from the Knights of St. John, the Ancient Order of Hibernians and Catholic Mutual Benefit association were also in attendance. Solemn High Mass of Requiem was sung by Rev. Christopher Walsh with Rev. J. J. Donnelly as deacon and Rt. Rev. Mgr. Robinson as sub-deacon. The sermon was preached by Mgr. Robinson. The pallbearers were Dr. P. V. Carlin, George D. Curtis, William Lawson, John A. Keefe, T. J. Quinlan, Thomas Sullivan, Laurence Bell and F. W. Paroth. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful. Interment was in the family lot in Mount Calvary cemetery, where service was conducted by the Knights of Columbus. Mr. McCarthy was a member.

Mr. McCarthy is survived by a widow and one daughter, Miss Esther McCarthy; also a son, Dennis McCarthy, who was away from home when his father died. A brother, John McCarthy, of New York, and three sisters complete the list of Mr. McCarthy's relatives. The sisters are Mrs. Katherine Concorde of Denver, Mrs. Thomas Hanlan of Los Angeles and Mrs. Patrick McAuliffe of Iowa. Much sympathy is felt for the family in this death, which followed a long illness. The only daughter, Miss Besale McCarthy, which occurred in August of this year. It was the shock of her death which necessitated a change to a lower altitude. Mrs. McCarthy and her health had just commenced to improve when she was summoned home by the death of her husband.

Death came on Sunday, November 1, to the relief of Pasquale Tobilli, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Josef Tobilli, prominent Italians of Denver. The little boy was just beginning to walk, pulled over a pan of scalding water on himself on October 21st, and in spite of all that medical science could do, suffered agony until he fell into his last sleep. The funeral took place Monday afternoon from the family home, 3435 Navajo street. Service was read in Mount Carmel church. Burial was in Mount Olivet cemetery.

H. A. Burlein of 1023 South Washington street died on Sunday, November 1, at his home. Funeral took place Tuesday morning from St. Francis de Sales church, which was filled with sorrowing friends. Requiem Mass was read by Rev. J. J. Donnelly and members of Denver council 539, Knights of Columbus, acted as pallbearers and escort to the cemetery.

Henry Stommel, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stommel, of 2241 Adams street, was buried Wednesday with Requiem Mass at St. Elizabeth's church. Interment was in Mount Olivet cemetery.

CONEJOS, COLO.

(Special Correspondence.)

Those who wish to see side by side the fruits of a purely secular education given by religions, as compared with that given by secular schools, would do well to pay a visit to Conejos and its neighboring town, Antonito, in southwestern Colorado. Even under the most adverse circumstances the superiority of the secular teaching is manifest to the most superficial observer.

While the Conejos public school is almost exclusively confined to Mexican children under the tuition of the Sisters of Loretto, yet in discipline and intellectual progress its pupils are considered much superior to those of the neighboring school at Antonito, where American children predominate. So true is this that the directors of the Conejos school, realizing the rare ability of the Catholic sisters here, on several occasions requested their superiors to take complete control of the school—a request, however, which owing to scarcity of teachers they were compelled to refuse. On last Wednesday the writer paid a flying visit to the Conejos school, little anticipating the intellectual treat in store for him in the different rooms.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Mexican children would easily outstrip in the intellectual race most pupils of our best American schools in corresponding grades. In penmanship, drawing, music, elocution, geography and geometry the seventh grade pupils gave exhibits that would do credit to students in the lower departments of our high schools. Throughout the remaining grades the same high standard of excellence was manifest and even the minims showed in their recitations the patience and skill brought to bear on their tender minds.

About a year ago the state superintendent of public instruction made an official visit to the Conejos school, and on seeing the wonderful proficiency of the children, asked the sisters, "How in the world have you been able to do it?" A similar exclamation will escape the lips of all visitors to the school, especially when they hear in mind the proverbial backwardness of Mexican children in most of our primary grades. The majority of our public school teachers are profuse in their complaints where Mexican pupils are concerned. They seem totally at a loss to either sympathize with or understand them, and have little idea of the fine ability lying dormant beneath their dark-brown complexions. In contemplating the results of the sisters' teaching in Conejos and a few neighboring schools in charge of the same Loretto order, one feels like exclaiming: Would that America had such teachers in all our institutions where the races are mixed; would that our poor Indian wards were subjected to similar discipline and care! The patience, tact, ability and piety of our Catholic sisters would solve a problem that reflects little credit on our boasted pretensions to disinterestedness and fair play.

HELENA, MONT.

The site of the new Catholic college to be erected in Helena, Mont., has been selected on Capitol hill, and construction will begin this fall. The plans are completed and advertisements will soon be prepared asking for bids.

This announcement has been made by Bishop Carroll, and is the beginning of the next step toward the completion of the trinity of structures Bishop Carroll determined upon two weeks after he became the head of the diocese of Helena. Two of the buildings, the cathedral and new Catholic school, both on Warren street, are now well under way, and within a month work on the college will have started. One building will be constructed at present and will be ready for occupancy within a year. It will be the nucleus of the group of college buildings which will be added as the needs of the institution require, and as it forges onward to the position of the most important educational institution—that of the largest and best Catholic college in the whole northwest and one of the foremost Catholic institutions of the United States. The land which Bishop Carroll has selected for the college consists of approximately forty-five acres, almost one-half of which is level. Half of the property, which for the last decade to former Governor S. T. Hauser, and the remaining half, a one-quarter undivided interest, belonged to the Great Northern Railway company and the other three-quarters to the George Bertine company of New York.
